PURPOSE AND RATIONALE OF THE QUALIFICATION

Purpose:

This qualification is an entry-level qualification and recognises the key competencies required of security personnel who are able to work in a variety of security contexts. This qualification will be for individuals who want to enter the security industry and develop competencies in standard security practices such as access and egress control, security response and patrols, asset protection and visible security operations.

Learners will operate mainly in the security sector, within a range of contexts, including rural, urban, corporate, mass, gatherings, homes and businesses. It will provide the learner with the competencies needed to undertake a range of security related processes and practices at an entry level. This qualification will entail that persons involved in the security environment will be able to practice the necessary knowledge, skills and attitudes to operate in a professional manner. The qualification will also enhance their career opportunities within the security environment.

The learner will be able to:

- Safeguard premises, assets, information and personnel.
- Interact with customers and people.
- Operate security equipment.

- Conduct security duties within the ambit of the law.

Rationale:

This qualification falls within the field of safety in society. To have an entry level qualification in the area of security is vital to deter and detect criminal activities that in turn supports government initiatives in this regard. The competencies in this qualification will contribute to a safer environment that is needed for economic development, financial investment and the development of business opportunities such as in the tourism industry.

Learners entering the field of security will be empowered by this qualification as it provides the elementary competencies needed in the security sector such as access and egress control, conducting patrols and observation techniques. This qualification is the first in a learning pathway for the security sector. After completion of this qualification, learners will be able to enter various security disciplines such as electronic security or close protection security.

Once learners have completed this qualification, they will be able to access higher qualifications within the learning pathway, and will be able to choose from specialised fields such as dog handling, assets in transit operations, firearm specialisations, etc.

LEARNING ASSUMED TO BE IN PLACE AND RECOGNITION OF PRIOR LEARNING

- Communication, NQF Level 2.
- Mathematical Literacy, NQF Level 2.

Recognition of Prior Learning:

The structure of this qualification makes the recognition of prior learning possible through the assessment of individual unit standards. This qualification may therefore be achieved in part or completely through the recognition of prior learning, which includes formal, informal and non-formal learning and work experience. Care should be taken that the mechanism used provides the learner with an opportunity to demonstrate competence and is not so onerous as to prevent learners from taking up the RPL option towards gaining a qualification.

If the learner is able to demonstrate competence in the knowledge, skills, values and attitudes implicit in this qualification the appropriate credits should be assigned to the learner. Recognition of prior learning will be done by means of integrated assessment as mentioned above.

Access to the Qualification:

Access is open to all learners bearing in mind the learning assumed to be in place.

Integrated Assessment:

Assessment should be carried out at regular intervals as well as at the end of the periods of study and should be offered in an integrated way. It is envisaged that learners will work at more than one unit standard at a time.

The achievement of applied competence of this qualification will be demonstrated if the learner is able to apply operational knowledge and skills to operate within a given security environment.

Evidence is required that the learner is able to achieve the purpose of the qualification as a whole at the time of the award of the qualification. Integration of skills will be demonstrated through the achievement of the core unit standards.

Assessors should note that evidence of integration could well be presented by learners when being assessed against the individual unit standards. Thus, there should not necessarily be separate assessments for each unit standard and then further assessment for integration. Well designed assessments should make it possible to gain evidence against each unit standard while at the same time gaining evidence of integration.

There are a number of core unit standards that through assessment will address competencies required in the fundamental unit standards. Evidence for these fundamental unit standards can therefore be obtained while the learner is providing evidence for core unit standards. This may also apply to the elective unit standards.

INTERNATIONAL COMPARABILITY

The security profession is an area with globally recognised best practices and standards. The current leaders in the security industry are the United Kingdom and the United States of America.

These two countries are regarded as the world leaders in different areas of security:

- The United States of America is regarded as the leader in air, land and rail port security.
- The United Kingdom is regarded as the leader in property security as well as office and business security.

The following qualifications, courses, modules and standards were used as part of the international comparability exercise:

United States of America-National Security Training Academy:

- Certificate I in Security Operations:
 - > Follow workplace safety procedures.
 - > Apply basic communications skills.
 - > Prepare for work in the security industry.

This certificate differs from this qualification as it does not deal with any real security issues but is only an introduction to the security environment. The communication module does however fit in with the communication fundamentals found in this qualification.

United States-National Security Training Academy:

- Certificate II in Security Operations:
 - > Communicate effectively in the security industry.
 - > Maintain workplace safety.
 - > Work effectively in the security industry.
 - > Work as part of time.
 - > Provide security service to customers.
 - > Provide first aid.
 - > Respond to security risk situation.
 - > Control access to and from premises.
 - > Monitor and control individual and crowd behaviour.
 - > Operate basic security equipment.
 - > Patrol premises.
 - > Protect self and others using basic defensive tactics.

There are only two areas, namely crowd behaviour and defensive tactics in the National Certificate: general Security Practices which are not addressed in the United States qualification. The South African Police Service Act controls crowd management in South Africa. This Act specifies that only law enforcement agencies (such as the South African Police Service) may perform crowd control, hence the exclusion of private security. For this reason crowd control has not been included in the National Certificate: General Security Practices.

United States of America-National Security Training Academy:

- NSA 01: Advanced Security Training:
 - > Level 111 Security.
 - > Mechanics Of Arrest.
 - > Tactical Flashlight.
 - > Certified Protection Officer.
 - > Personal Protection Officer.
 - > Healthcare Security.
 - > Office/Office Building Security.
 - > Bomb Threats/Responding To Emergencies.
 - > Terrorism Awareness.
 - > CPR First Aid.
 - > Cultural Awareness.
 - > Airport Security.
 - > Armoured Car Security.

> Bank Security.

This programme compares well with the FETC Specialist Security Practices qualification that is part of the vertical articulation in the learning pathway designed by private security and follows on from the National Certificate: General Security Practices.

The conclusion can therefore be made that the USA qualifications do now only compare well in terms of content but in terms of the structured learning pathways to the South African qualifications in the security sector.

United Kingdom-Skills for Security

- Basic Job Training (BJT)-Security Guarding:
 - > Role and responsibilities.
 - > Patrolling.
 - > Access control.
 - > Searching.
 - > Security and emergency systems.
 - > Fire awareness.
 - > Health and safety.
 - > The Law.
 - > Equality and diversity.
 - > Emergencies.
 - > Customer care and social skills.
 - > Communication and reporting.

This course compares well to the National Certificate General Security Practices. The only differences in content are that the National Certificate: General Security Practices does not deal with fire awareness. The reason for this is that fire contained is prescribed by law in South Africa and only certain institutions may demonstrate fire fighting capabilities.

Benchmarking was only done with countries who have National Qualifications Frameworks in order to assess whether their set security standards contain the same content as the standards set in the National Certificate: General Security Practices.

New Zealand Qualifications Framework:

- Unit standards in the Domain 'Security Staff Services': Levels 2 and 3.

Level 2:

- > ID20596: Demonstrate knowledge required for employment in the security industry.
- > ID21105: Demonstrate introductory knowledge of the security industry.
- > ID21106: Demonstrate knowledge of law relevant to security officers.
- > ID21107: Demonstrate communication skills as a security officer.
- > ID21108: Demonstrate knowledge of professional standards required of a security officer.

Level 3:

- > ID15277: Demonstrate knowledge of security communications.
- > ID15278: Demonstrate knowledge of security operations.
- > ID15279: Operate a security communications control station.
- > ID15280: Manage telephone communications with individuals in security threat situations.
- > ID20595: Demonstrate knowledge of the threat presented by terrorism.
- > ID21109: Demonstrate knowledge of security staff interaction with the legal system.
- > ID21110: Demonstrate knowledge of and operate electronic equipment as a security officer.
- > ID21737: Manage violence and personal safety as a security officer.
- > ID6519: Demonstrate knowledge of protective security.
- > ID6521: Maintain site security.
- > ID6522: Operate site security systems.
- > ID6523: Respond to emergencies and critical situations as a security officer.
- > ID6525: Maintain event security.
- > ID6526: Maintain retail security.
- > ID6529: Serve legal documents, as a security operator.
- > ID6531: Control electronic safety and security systems in a site control room.
- > ID8616: Solve security problems in a specified workplace.

These unit standards compare well to those found in the National Certificate: General Security Practices. The main difference between the National Certificate: General Security Practices and the New Zealand standards is that the New Zealand standards also deal with terrorism while the private security industry in South Africa is prohibited by law to deal with terrorism. Terrorism is dealt with by statutory intelligence and law enforcement sectors within South Africa. Hence the fact that the National Certificate: General Security Practices has no competencies outlined dealing with terrorism. The New Zealand standards also differ from the unit standards in the National Certificate: General Security Practices as they are more in terms of quantity while the unit standards in National Certificate: General Security Practices have combined more outcomes into fewer unit standards.

Australia-International Security Training Academy:

- Certificate II in Security Operations:
 - > Communicate effectively in the security industry.
 - > Respond to security risk situation.
 - > Screen baggage and people.
 - > Patrol premises.
 - > Provide lost and found facility.
 - > Contribute to investigations.
 - > Carry out vehicle checks.
 - > Use communication system.
 - > Maintain workplace safety.
 - > Work as part of a team.
 - > Protect persons.
 - > Control access to and exit from premises.
 - > Monitor and control crowd behaviour.
 - > Operate basic security equipment.
 - > Work effectively in the security industry.
 - > Provide security services to customers.
 - > Give evidence in court.
 - > Protect valuables in transit.
 - > Direct and control traffic.
 - > Monitor electronic reporting facility.
 - > Undertake loading and unloading.

The composition of the above-mentioned certificate is similar to the National Certificate: General Security Practices. The elective unit standards are different to those in this certificate programme. These electives also address certain competencies such as directing traffic normally associated in South Africa with law enforcement agencies (nor private security) and will therefore not be found in the National Certificate: General Security Practices.

A comparison was also done with Canada as it places emphases on security aspects related to public and entertainment events. Comparisons were done with the following:

Canada (British Columbia)-Kwantlen University College:

- Public Safety Communications Certificate:
 - > Call processing.
 - > Radio communications.
 - > Human behaviour.
 - > Legal and regulatory influences.
 - > Emergency planning.
 - > Police communications.
 - > Fire communications.
 - > Emergency medical communications.

This certificate does not compare well with the National Certificate: General Security Practices as it deals almost exclusively with communication practices for security personnel. Communication competencies are found in the fundamental component of the National Certificate: General Security Practices only.

Canada (British Columbia)-Securiguard:

- Basic Security Training I and II:
 - > Drug awareness.
 - > First aid.
 - > Powers of arrest.
 - > Bike patrol skills and tactics.
 - > Bomb search procedures and tactical communications skills.
 - > Crowd management.
 - > Report writing skills.
 - > Conflict resolution.
 - > Ethnic diversity.
 - > Workplace harassment.
 - > Security Supervisor.
 - > Robbery prevention and retail loss prevention.
 - > Mobile patrol tactics.
 - > Community foot patrol volunteers.
 - > Access control.
 - > Security host.
 - > Traffic control.
 - > Dispatcher duties.
 - > CCTV monitoring.
 - > Property inspections for criminal activities.

This programme has a number of elements that compare well to the National Certificate: General Security Practices. In the National Certificate: General Security Practices the following core components are reflected which are also covered in this qualification from Canada namely: Access control, patrolling and first aid. There however a few modules that are not addressed in the National Certificate: General Security Practices such as traffic control, crowd management and bomb search procedures which are not dealt with by private security organisations but falls within the domain of law enforcement agencies.

Based on the above exercise there are a number of certificates, qualifications and programmes that compare well to the National Certificate General Security Practices. There are however two recognisable differences, in this Certificate competencies that are generally covered by law enforcement agencies are not covered. The South African qualification also has s and we have a strong focus on "actual responsibilities" as this has a major impact on security in the South Africa context.
